DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

1. Claims 34-57 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Edwards et al. US 5,819,029 in view of O'Neal et al. US 5,887,253.

1.1 Regarding claims 34 and 46, Edwards discloses a third party verification system in figure 1, comprising:

a receiver (a telephone interface in the system controller 112) associated with a third party verification (TPV) service to receive, during a telecommunication call, a reply message to confirm an authorized switching to a new long distance service (a telephone service inherently has term and condition) (column 9, line 41 to column 10, line 63; column 12, lines 59-67);

a processor (system controller 112) in communication with the receiver;

a database (IVR response repository 114) in communication with the processor; and wherein the processor creates a record in the database, including audio recordings of affirmative acceptance of the long distance service (column 13, line 66 to column 14, line 23; column 15, lines 27-61).

Edwards teaches verifying, without a service contract, a switch to another a long distance telephone service provider. Edwards is silent on the terms and conditions of a contract.

However, O'Neal teaches a voice response unit (VRU) for playing a pre-recorded voice messages (prompts) concerning terms and conditions of a mobile telephone service to a potential customer, and recording responses from the customer. O'Neal teaches prompting the customer, without a contract, to accept terms and conditions, charges and payment, and other contract related provisions (column 13, lines 19-25).

Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify Edwards' reference with the teaching of O'Neal, so that terms and conditions prompts would have been played to and accepted by a customer without a contract, because such a modification would have provided proof that a customer understood and approved the terms of a new service.

1.2 Regarding claim 35, Edwards teaches that a spoken reply message indicates an acceptance of a telephone service (column 10, lines 43-55, 61-63; column 12, lines 64-67).

1.3 Regarding claims 36 and 47, Edwards teaches recording a subscriber's identity information (column 14, lines 1-2).

1.4 Regarding claim 37, Edwards teaches indicating a service provide identity (column 10, lines 49-51; column 12, lines 64-67).

1.5 Regarding claim 38, Edwards teaches timing information of a call (column 6, lines 44-46).

1.6 Regarding claim 39, Edwards teaches the identity of a calling party (telemarketer) (column 10, lines 11-15).

1.7 Regarding claims 40 and 48, Edwards teaches recording a customer's responses to verification prompts (column 10, lines 61-64).

1.8 Regarding claims 41, 49 and 50, it is inherent that by law, a service provider is required to mail a customer a printed copy of terms and conditions of a service contract (see US 3,999,700, column 3, lines 28-33).

1.9 Regarding claims 42 and 51, Edwards teaches a verbal service message (column 10, lines 49-51; column 12, lines 64-67).

1.10 Regarding claims 43 and 52, Edwards teaches a long distance telephone service (column 10, lines 49-51; column 12, lines 64-67).

1.11 regarding claims 44 and 53, Edwards teaches a voice call initiated by a telemarketer (column 9, lines 41-51).

1.12 Regarding claim 45, Edwards teaches conferencing a telemarketer with the verification process, and in that the telemarketer may speak to the customer on intervene at any time (column 10, lines 24-28).

1.13 Regarding claims 54-57, Edwards teaches prompting a customer to say 'yes' or 'no' to a long distance telephone service (column 12, lines 64-67).

Response to Arguments

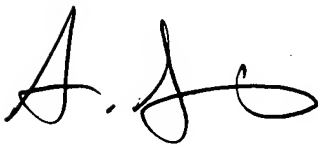

2. Applicant's arguments filed on 10/30/2007 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicant argues that Edward and O'Neal fail to teach the claimed limitation of: "wherein the terms and conditions are accepted without a contract".

As stated in the rejection above, Edward teaches, without a service contact, prompting a customer to verify an acceptance of a communications service. O'Neal teaches verifying, without a contract, an acceptance of terms, condition and other contract provisions. Therefore, both Edwards and O'Neal teach accepting terms and conditions of a service without a contract.
